NSG team in city to conduct probe

Powder-waste dumped after converting coconut shells into charcoal caused fire, opines Bengaluru chemical engineer

Mysuru, Apr. 20 (RK&BCT)- A unit of National Security Guards (NSG) that specialises in explosives and radiation accidents is in city to probe the mystery fire that occurred at Shyadanahalli near Belavatha killing a teenager recently.

Taking the incident seriously and considering its gravity, a four-member team from the NSG has arrived in city this morning for investigation.

Police sources told Star of Mysore that the team is headed by Vishwanathan, a Superintendent of Police-ranking officer. The team is put up at RMP Guest House, Lakshmipuram.

The NSG team is expected to visit Shyadanahalli in a day or two after completing the preliminary ground work.

Police sources said that the NSG team will probe the incident independently and will have no contact with the local Police or other investigating teams.

The NSG's primary role is to combat terrorism in whatever form and is specially equipped and trained to deal with specific situations to be used only in exceptional situations. Sources said that the team would have visited Mysuru to probe the "mystery fire" under instructions from the Central Government. It will probe the effects of radiation as the team has been trained to handle such sensitive situations.

Governance Vs administration

An oft-heard comment is that India is the world's best administered country, although with the rider that it is so only on paper. On the home front, voices have been aired in the circles of State Legislature that the present administration in Karnataka is the worst in its six-plus decades of history. While the incumbent National Democratic Alliance (NDA) government at the Centre is heading to complete and celebrate its three years at the helm at the end of a few weeks from now, remarks in public domain reflect that the 33-party alliance led by Bharatiya Janata Party, the virtually only national political party, has not exactly lived up to its pre-poll (2014) promise of good governance to the land's citizens. Also, the style of administration in the Union Government has drawn flak at the hands of the opposition in the nation's Parliament. Two more years are in its disposal to neutralise the uncomplimentary remarks whoever has aired them.

Pages of history, realistically or otherwise, have portrayed many dynasties that have ruled in the various regions of the now-divided Indian sub-continent at different periods over the past few centuries. However, one doesn't get an objectively perceived picture about the quality of governance or administration during those rules. The first-half of the last century, unarguably, witnessed the reign of Nalwadi Krishnaraja Wadiyar acclaimed by all as a model of both governance and administration.

Barring exceptions, the current scene in a typical Indian family prompts one to fall back on the perceived structure of society in general and families in particular, the former blessed with mentors of their times and the latter blessed by the presence of grandpas and grandmas. Administration in the family, being in the safe hands of its grandpa as well its governance by the grandma have been both the sheet anchor and hallmark of the land's past culture. The parents of our times yield easily to stereotyping them for their abysmally poor standards of administration, not to talk of their acumen for governance. Promulgating ordinances, launching Acts, framing strangulating rules and talking of sanctioned staff strength in the government to fill vacancies (marked by favouritism and nepotism, not to forget greasing the palm of you-know-who) mirror the face of administration, as familiar to all.

Leveraging power and authority by functionaries in government being the name of the game of administration in our times it is naive on the part of citizens to reminisce the bygone era of governance that the erstwhile Princely State of Mysore was blessed with. Responding to the needs of citizens and reacting on the strength of authority are different kettles of fish.

TAXING TIMES: Tax officials have been burning the midnight oil since November 8, when demonetisation began, with the intent of nabbing black money hoarders. They have been monitoring high-value deposits in bank accounts and making such taxpayers explain the source of their cash. Besides late night duties, tax officials are said to be sacrificing their weekends and holidays. They were working over the three-day weekend that began on Good Friday, busy preparing an action plan to identify tax evaders. When asked why they were working so hard, a senior official replied, "Government servants are working on holidays for the betterment of the Nation." — In Business Standard.

Virtually tying knot with anime girlfriend

Tokyo: To make its newest romance video game stand out from the competition, a Japanese company is giving users the chance to marry their virtual girlfriends in a real life wedding ceremony, with the help of VR technology.

At first glance, Niitzuma LovelyxCation is a romance and dating simulator like many others in Japan. The three anime protagonists – Yuki Isurugi (long black hair), Aiko Kurihara (short brown hair), or Nono Naruse (blond hair) — eventually get married to them, to make the illusion of a virtual marriage more believable, it plans to organise a real-life wedding for the "grooms" in an actual chapel.

Niitzuma LovelyxCation is set to launch on Apr.28, but Hibiki Works, the maker of the video game, has announced the special wedding ceremonies will be held on June 30, at an undisclosed location in Tokyo. The company is apparently confident that it will find plenty of grooms for its three anime characters, and has released a few details about the proceedings way ahead of time.

Cow dung cake battle

Andhra Pradesh: Every year, the people of Kairuppala, a village in India's Andhra Pradesh State, engage in an epic cow dung cake battle that often leaves dozens injured. They believe the tradition brings them good health and prosperity.

Legend has it that Lord Veerabhadra Swamy, a fearsome form of the Hindu god Shiva, and the Goddess Bhadrakhali fell in love and decided to marry. In order to tease his beloved, Veerabhadra Swamy declared that he did not want to marry anymore, which enraged Bhadrakhali & her clansmen, who decided to teach a lesson by beating him with cow dung cakes. But the goofy battle ended in compromise and the much awaited celestial wedding. Today, the devotees of the village celebrate their union by re-enacting the same unconventional weapons. Mounds of dried cow dung cakes are heaped in the centre of the village, and thousands of devotees split into two groups, the Veerabhadra Swamy & the Bhadrakhali side. As participants arm themselves with cow dung cakes in one hand and towels in the other for protection.

BIMS should not be given to private player

Sir,

This letter is in response to Prof. K.S. Rangappa's remarks on granting autonomy to B.N. Bahadur Institute of Management Sciences (BIMS) in his interview (Former University Vice-Chancellor Speaks; SOM dated Apr.16).

Though it is important to grant autonomy to BIMS to be independent and more practical oriented, University of Mysore (UoM) should not hand over its institution to some private players or foundations to run MBA course. The BIMS and UoM have highly qualified faculty to run management course on their own. What UoM should do is allow BIMS to be independent and chart out its own action plan to be on par with IIMs and other reputed management schools in India. To be on par with IIMs, UoM should provide necessary infrastructure and recruit highly qualified faculty to run programme along with some industry liaisons.

Dr. B.N. Bahadur is interested in taking over the institute and run BIMS on their own. The BIMS is part of UoM and no space or building should be handed over to any private individual or organisation. The UoM has been running MBA programme since 1974 and has created a solid foundation. Just because of Dr. Bahadur has given funds for physical infrastructure development, it is not that BIMS should be handed over to him and his Foundation.

Like any other alumnus, B.N. Bahadur has given munificent donations to UoM to upgrade the Institution at the University. The UoM acknowledged his immense contributions by renaming University Management School as B.N. Bahadur Institute of Management Sciences and also conferred honorary doctorate to B.N. Bahadur in 2007.

Once the University space is allowed to be given to private institutions and individuals, a day will come when those who have money will tear apart UoM campus and the whole idea of why this University was started will be vanished. The acting Vice-Chancellor Prof. Dayanand Mane has taken the right decision in the recently concluded University Syndicate Meeting not to handover this great higher education institute to Dr. Bahadur.

Irregularities in KSOU: CID team questions former VCs

K.S. Rangappa M.G. Krishnan

Mysuru, Apr. 20 (RK&BCT)- The Criminal Investigation Department (CID) that is probing the alleged irregularities at the Karnataka State Open University (KSOU) has began its investigation. It has questioned former Vice-Chancellor of University of Mysore Prof. K.S. Rangappa who was also the KSOU Vice-Chancellor.

The team is functioning from the first floor of the Jayalakshmipuram Police Station from the office of the Cyber Crime Police. The team is headed by S. Revanna, Deputy Superintendent of Police, Economic Offences wing, CID, Bengaluru and is assisted by CID Inspector Hemalatha. The team arrived in Mysuru on Apr. 13 and is verifying records, collecting evidence and is also questioning the accused.

Prof K.S. Rangappa and six others have been booked under various sections of the IPC for alleged misappropriation of funds in the KSOU. The Karnataka Governor's office had written to the KSOU to file a case against Prof. Rangappa, another former KSOU VC Prof. M.G. Krishnan, former KSOU Dean T.D. Devegowda, former KSOU Registrar Prof. B.S. Vishwanath, KSOU Director (IT division) Dr. Kamlesh, Deputy Registrar of KSOU Ramanathan and former KSOU Registrar (Administration) P.S. Naik.

Prof. Rangappa was summoned to the Cyber Crime Police atop Jayalakshmipuram Police Station on Apr. 13 and was questioned about the irregularities. Speaking to Star of Mysore this morning, Prof. Rangappa said that he had appeared before the CID team along with relevant records.

"The team questioned me for about 15 minutes and I had gone there with all the records. Around 20 days back, the CID team had called me and had asked me to appear before it in Bengaluru. As I was out of the country, I had expressed my inability. I have explained the case to them in detail now," he said.

Prof. M.G. Krishnan told SOM that he was summoned on Apr. 18 and was questioned for over an hour. "I had taken some documents along with the ones I had obtained under RTI and answered the CID team's questions," he said.

Sources said that the team will question the other accused too and it might take a couple of days for it to wind up the questioning process and carry out further investigation. The team will also visit the KSOU offices to examine records.

It may be recalled here that the case against the accused was lodged by KSOU Finance Officer A. Khadar Pasha based on the directive by the then KSOU Vice-Chancellor D. Shivalingaiah in August 2016.

The Governor's Office had asked the Varsity to initiate legal action against the wrongdoers and had constituted Justice Bhakthavatsala Committee to probe the alleged irregularities between 2009 and 2014. The Committee had indicted the employees for irregularities.

Centralised Committee to clear University appointments

Government move aims to curb corruption, nepotism in State-run Universities

Basavaraja

Bengaluru, Apr. 20- In a move that is being perceived as an attempt to reform State-run Universities, the State Government has proposed comprehensive amendments to the Karnataka State Universities Act, 2000. According to the amendments, a 'Centralised Appointment Committee' will be constituted to clear all appointments in the Universities. This is to curb corruption and nepotism in the Universities.

The Committee will have sweeping powers to make both teaching and non-teaching staff appointments for Universities and the bodies that are governed by the University authorities. The Government's move comes in the wake of allegations that the University heads are making questionable appointments that are mostly leading to corruption in the education system.

A meeting of all the University heads across the State was held in Bengaluru yesterday to discuss the constitution of the 'Centralised Appointment Committee.' The meeting was chaired by Higher Education Minister Basavaraja Rayareddy. Vice-Chancellors of all the 25 Universities in Karnataka participated.

While the 'Centralised Appointment Committee' is proposed to curb corruption, it could also restrict the authority of the Vice-Chancellors. The Minister said that taking cognisance of financial irregularities in over a dozen Universities across the State, reported in the past five years, the Government has proposed to rescind the absolute powers of the VCs in appointment and construction activities.

"We will also set up Karnataka Higher Education Construction Company and Karnataka Higher Education Recruitment Commission, to bring about transparency in the financial transactions of the Universities. This will curb corruption in recruitment of teaching and non-teaching personnel," he said.

"Our idea is to ensure that Universities are accountable, and their mode of functioning remains transparent. This will also ensure that the focus of the Universities remains on academic issues," he said. Despite orders that Vice-Chancellors have no powers to make any appointments six months before demitting office, several Vice-Chancellors have flouted the rules, Rayareddy said.

He went on to add that the Government would eschew the practice of appointing faculty members to administrative positions. "We will look to appoint eligible KAS and IAS Officers to the post of Registrars. We will appoint professional financial and Accounts Officers, who will ensure proper maintenance of accounts," Rayareddy said.

The amendment also proposes to change rules pertaining to the selection and appointment of VCs — by appointing committed and able individuals to search Committees.

The appointment process for teaching and non-teaching staff at Universities will be along the lines of those selected through the Karnataka Public Service Commission (KPSC).

The Commission will issue notification for recruitment, and the candidates will be selected following tests and interviews, the Minister added.

Direct recruitment of specialist doctors to Govt. Hospitals

Bengaluru, Apr.20 (US&KMS)- The State Cabinet is said to have given approval yesterday to recruit specialist doctors to vacant posts in Government Hospitals through direct recruitment and would be appointed on a special grade with perks.

The decision was taken in the wake of many specialist doctors unwilling to work in Government hospitals especially in rural areas.

The Government's decision is likely to benefit rural areas with shortage of doctors. The new recruitment policy is said to apply to nurses and staff also. Over 900 specialist doctors and 300 Medical Officers would be appointed as per the plan. It is learnt that vacant posts of doctors in AYUSH Department too would be filled as per the new policy.

The Government has consented to hand over 10 acres of Gomala land near Begur village of Gundlupet taluk in Chamarajanagar district to Agricultural Produce Marketing Committee (APMC) to set up cotton marketing stalls.

Pollution Board officials raid illegal dyeing units, seize materials

Mysuru, Apr. 20 (YDS&KS)- Pollution Control officials, who raided three illegal dyeing units in city on Wednesday, have seized a total of 10 tonnes of cloth materials from these units.

It is reported that one Nataraj, a native of Tamil Nadu, after taking the land belonging to one Marigowda on lease in Kalalawadi on H.D. Kote Road, was illegally operating a dyeing unit there.

Though the Pollution Control officials had served him a notice, Nataraj hoodwinked them by stopping the works during daytime to convince the officials that he had stopped the activity, but used to operate the unit during nights.

Acting on a tip off, Environmental Officer Raghuram, along with his team, raided the illegal dyeing unit on Wednesday. Following the raid, the workers fled from the spot.

Similar raids were conducted on illegal dyeing units in Kesare and Rajeev Nagar and the officials have seized 10 tonnes of clothes from these illegal dyeing units.

Accident victim succumbs to injuries

Mysuru, Apr. 20 (RK&KS)- A person, who suffered serious injuries in an accident and underwent treatment at a private hospital before being discharged, passed away at his residence in city last evening.

The deceased has been identified as Mahadev (65), a resident of Kyathamaranahalli here.

It is reported that Mahadev, on Apr. 1, had been to Srirangapatna and was returning to Mysuru on his Honda Activa scooter, when a speeding bike rammed into his scooter from behind near VRL on Bengaluru-Mysuru Highway causing serious injuries to him.

He was immediately admitted to a private hospital in city and was discharged after 15 days as there was very little chances of Mahadev recovering from the injuries. Mahadev died at his residence yesterday evening.

The body was sent to MMC&RI mortuary for post-mortem and would be handed over to his relatives later.

N.R. Traffic Inspector C. Kiran Kumar, who has registered a case in this regard in this regard, is investigating.

Uploading of students' profiles on 'escort' website

Cyber Police remove post, launch hunt to trace the culprits

Mysuru, Apr. 20 (YDS&KS)- Following complaints by eight students who are pursuing Science courses in Mysore University that their photographs including their profile and phone numbers have been uploaded in a 'escort' website and they have been receiving obscene calls and messages, the Cyber Police have removed the same from the website and have launched a hunt to trace the culprits.

It is reported that the students who began to receive obscene calls and messages on their mobile phones on Tuesday had brought the same to the notice of Varsity Registrar Prof. R. Rajanna, who directed them to lodge a Police complaint, which they did.

Sources said that the Cyber Police, who has taken up the investigation have lodged a hunt to find out who had uploaded the students' profiles, mobile numbers and photographs to the website and added that once the IP address from where the photographs and the profiles were uploaded is found, an FIR would be filed in this regard.

Decoding Mythology

Dr. Devdutt Pattanaik - Author, Speaker, Illustrator, Mythologist

Imagining a nation's past

Historians and sociologists do not like the word mythology. They prefer words invented by them: IMAGINARY. In doing so, they locate themselves in a position of power, outside any imaginary, in the realm of 'truth.' But a historian who is successful under a Government is usually one who nourishes that Government's imaginary. Government imaginaries are usually of two types: reforming imaginaries and reclaiming imaginaries.

In reforming imaginaries, the past is seen as foul and in need of cleansing. In reclaiming imaginaries, the past is seen as great that needs to be re-established. Thus, in Nehruvian times, the past that needed reforming was Brahminical, feudal, unequal, in need of cleansing with a scientific temper. The narrative enabled suspicion of all private enterprise, and justified positive discrimination and minority appeasement. In Modi's time, the past that needs reclaiming is Vedic, a homogenous society, full of great scientific discoveries, and nobility, disrupted by Muslim and British invaders. This narrative demonises Universities that speak of social justice and equality, and justifies re-framing Hinduism in narrow nationalistic terms.

This construction of the past is not unique to India. We find this in China, too. In the 1960s, when China was avowedly Communist, the government produced a stage show called the East is Red that presented China's past as imperial, feudal and miserable. However, in 2008, during the Beijing Olympics, the government displayed a great pride in its noble harmonious past, an idea now being presented through various Confucian Institutes around the world, and specially designed tourist attractions for domestic as well as foreign travellers. In its own self-conception, China rarely sees itself as the aggressor; it believes other countries were drawn to it by its wealth and brilliance, submitting to it voluntarily, because it was the proper thing to do. Both old and the new Communist imaginaries spoke of 'the century of foreign humiliation' and rejected all mention of 'thousand years of Chinese domination' that informed Vietnamese national imaginary.

Lest it be seen as an Eastern disease, let us take a look at America's imaginary. The reformist Obama referred constantly to economic and social inequality, and did not shy away from the past based on slavery of African Americans and dispossession and eradication of Native Americans. Everyone around the world saw America as the land of freedom and opportunity, one that fought for liberty and equality, yet more and more rural Americans themselves saw it as a land of eroding values, with a great need to make America great again, under the leadership of Donald Trump, in whose imaginary immigrants are the problem, creating inequality by their demands. One of his Ministers, an African American neurosurgeon, stated at a public forum that African American slaves were actually early immigrants who have not made the most of the opportunities America has given us. Their laziness, and addiction to social welfare keeps them poor.

In Europe, children are taught how European Enlightenment gave the world rationality and science, which is true. But, they are not taught how Enlightenment gave rise to forces that enabled colonialism. While Germany was humiliated for its treatment of Jewish people, Britain has never been shamed for its treatment of India over two centuries of colonial rule. Thus, secular mythologies, that is, imaginaries, thrive everywhere, and enable the rise and fall of governments.

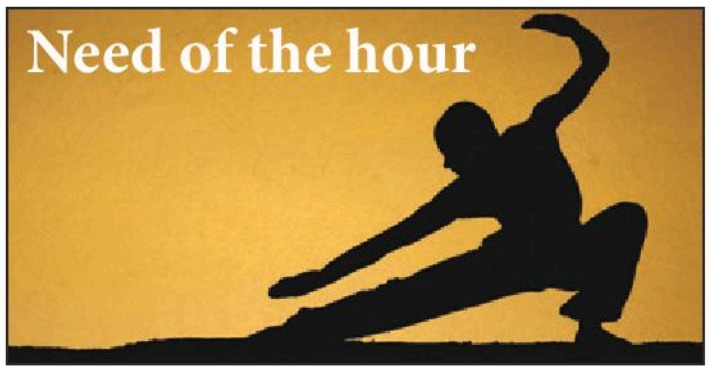
SELF-DISCIPLINE

By N.K.A. Ballal,
Retd. Sr. Vice-President, ITDC



Ballal

One walks into a dinner engagement. After the dinner is over, you notice a young man or a woman pick up their plates and politely ask their hostess if they can wash and keep back their dinner plates. How do you react? Wow, what an upbringing? Is this something inborn and genetic? Of course not. It is something taught, observed and inculcated, that is, self-discipline. It's no rocket science.

There are many important qualities that can contribute to a person's achievements and happiness, but there is only one that begets sustainable, long-term success in all aspects of life: SELF-DISCIPLINE. Whether in terms of your diet, fitness, work ethics or relationships, self-discipline is the number one trait needed to accomplish goals, lead a healthy lifestyle and ultimately be happy and make others around you happy too.

When I was in service, I had a reputation of not coming late even for a morning shift at 6am, come rain or shine. The same trait continued all through my service. It became a habit and I could not think of going late even for a train journey or a movie? How did I develop this? No magic, a small stint of NCC in my school days did the trick. Automatically all people connected with you like your better -half, children, colleagues, subordinates also fall in line and develop this habit.

Self-discipline is required in all aspects of one's life even while doing things like consuming liquor. A person with self-discipline will never get drunk even if he or she has to consume liquor. They do it in moderation to keep company or decorum.

People with high self-control are happier than those without. These people spent less time debating whether to indulge in behaviours detrimental to their health and are able to make positive decisions more easily. The self-disciplined did not allow their choices to be dictated by impulses or feelings. Instead, they made informed, rational decisions on a daily basis without feeling overly stressed or upset.

Despite what many may think, self-discipline is a LEARNED BEHAVIOUR. It requires practice and repetition in your day-to-day life. To improve your own self-discipline, test out these 5 proven methods for gaining better control. This regimen will help you establish good habits, break bad ones and improve your control by making simple changes to your everyday routine. Improved self-discipline will allow you to live a freer life by helping you to make healthy choices, not emotional ones. Give it a shot.

1. Remove temptations: Self-control is often easiest when abiding by the old saying, "Out of sight, out of mind." Removing all temptations and distractions from your environment is a crucial first step when working to improve your self-discipline. If you are trying to have better control of your eating, toss the junk food. Eat healthy food as much as possible. Easier said than done.

If you want to improve your focus while working, turn off your cell phone and remove the clutter from your desk. If by chance you have to turn off your facebook, do it.

2. Eat regularly and healthily: Studies have shown that low blood sugar often weakens a person's resolve. When you're hungry, your ability to concentrate suffers as your brain is not functioning to its highest potential. Hunger makes it difficult to focus on the tasks at hand, not to mention making you grumpy and pessimistic. In order to stay on track, make sure that you are well fuelled throughout the day with healthy snacks and meals every few hours. In service, I personally made sure to always have some roasted chana on hand. Eating often regulates your blood sugar levels and improves your decision-making skills and concentration.

3. Don't wait for it to "feel right": Improving your self-discipline means by changing up your normal routine which can be uncomfortable and awkward. When a behaviour becomes habit, we stop using our decision-making skills and instead function on auto-pilot. Therefore, breaking a bad habit and building a new habit not only requires us to make active decisions, it will feel wrong. Your brain will resist the change in favour of what it has been programmed to do. The solution? Keep on trying. It will happen.

4. Schedule breaks, treats and rewards for yourself: Self-discipline does not mean your new regimen needs to be entirely hard core. In fact, giving yourself zero wiggle room often results in failures, disappointments and giving into your old ways. While practicing self-control, schedule specific breaks, treats and rewards for yourself.

Dieting? Designate Saturday as masala dosa day. Trying to lose weight? Treat yourself with a fancy massage after a month of gym trips. Working on controlling your spending? Allow yourself a Rs. 500 splurge at the mall on Sunday (Leave the credit card at home and bring cash only).

5. Forgive yourself and move forward: Instituting a new way of thinking won't always go according to plan. You will have ups and downs, fabulous successes and flat out failures. The key is to keep moving forward. When you have a setback, acknowledge what caused it and move on. It is easy to get wrapped up in guilt, anger or frustration, but these emotions will not help build improve self-discipline. Instead, use the hiccups in your plan as learning experiences for the future. Forgive yourself and get back in the saddle ASAP. The longer you're off your game, the harder it is to keep going in a positive direction.

To conclude, SELF-DISCIPLINE STARTS FROM YOUR OWN HOME. Who are the biggest copycats in the world. It's your own children. For every child their parents are the role models and they copy the mannerisms, discipline etc. So it is important that parents change themselves and ensure that the children are taught self-discipline from their very young formative age. Every parent want their wards to be a first ranker and know in their hearts that it is not possible. However, if one inculcates self-discipline to their wards, the result can be seen all through their lives. The harsh truth is that if you live a bindaas life, you cannot expect your children to be self-disciplined. A self-disciplined child can survive in this harsh world, even if he or she is not a first ranker. Sports, martial arts or a stint in NCC does help. Do you agree?

Rana traces Prince's missing tooth

Rana

Gundlupet, Apr. 20- Rana, the German Shepherd sniffer dog at Bandipur, which has created terror among poachers and smugglers, has traced the missing tooth of the celebrity Tiger Prince (14), which was found dead under mysterious circumstances with its face chopped off in Lokkere range in Bandipur.

Rana, which was inducted into Bandipur Forest Department to protect the forest from poachers, was successful in nabbing timber smugglers and poachers by going straight to their houses and thus helping the officials.

It is learnt that the Forest officials took Rana to the spot yesterday, where the body of Prince was found and also to the place a little further where the chopped off face of Prince was found. Rana sniffed out the tooth of Prince from between the rocks.

It may be recalled that the carcass of Prince was found recently with its face missing. While some said that Prince had become a victim of poachers, who had planted a meat bomb and met its tragic end when the bomb exploded inside the mouth, the forest officials were not ready to accept the theory that Prince may have been killed by poachers.

They argued that Prince had died a natural death and that some animals may have mauled his dead body causing injuries of its face and head.

Prince's carcass strongly hints that he may have fallen prey to poachers' traps as there were injuries only on his head, typically caused due to an explosion and his body was intact.

But experts say that it is unlikely that wild animals may have mauled Prince's carcass, mainly because the meat of tiger has a very strong, pungent smell making it difficult even for wild animals to consume.

Further, if wild animals had mauled Prince's carcass, it is a far possibility that they may have only eaten away the face leaving the body as it is. The missing snout portion of Prince was also found later.

Following the mysterious death of Prince, wildlife lovers had staged a protest in Bengaluru and other places also, demanding a thorough probe into its death.

JUMBO CROSSING

Forest Department to heighten iron railings by adding solar fence

Bengaluru, Apr. 20 - Following the publication of a series of photographs of a jumbo crossing over the iron railing fence at Nagarahole Reserve Forest in newspapers and the pictures doing rounds in the social media, the Forest Department has decided to increase the height of the existing 10 ft tall fence by a foot by adding solar fence.

Sources in the Forest Department said that it would be a costly affair for the Department to increase the height using railings, hence it was decided to increase the height by installing solar fence over the existing railings.

Sources said that about 22kms of iron rail fence had been erected in Nagarahole, out of which 50% would be of 10 ft. height.

A Forest official said that elephants are very intelligent animals and are known to manoeuvre their way in the forest.

The official said that it has come to the notice of the Forest Department that this is the only tusker which crosses the iron rail fence and the photographs obtained from the camera trap also shows the same.

The official also clarified that the pictures showed the tusker returning to the forest and not going out of the forest as reported. He added that farmers of huge plantations on the other side of the fence have not complained of any crops being destroyed by elephants.

Meanwhile, an elephant expert said that the Department should try the Armstrong Elephant Trench model adopted in Addo National Park, South Africa, where in the last 64 years, only one elephant had crossed over.

State rejects Kasturirangan report on Western Ghats

Decision taken at Cabinet meet; Centre urged to withdraw third notification on the report

Bengaluru, Apr. 20 - Reiterating its opposition to implementation of Kasturirangan Report on saving the eco-sensitive Western Ghat region, the State government has decided to urge the Centre to withdraw the third notification on the report.

The State Cabinet which met here yesterday took the decision to this effect. Karnataka has been opposing the report consistently and had filed its objections again after the report was notified for the third time on February 27, 2017.

"We will appeal to the Union government not to implement the report," Law and Parliamentary Affairs Minister T.B. Jayachandra told reporters after the meeting. The report, if implemented, would make life miserable for lakhs of people as it seeks to declare 1,576 villages in 10 districts — Belagaavi, Chikkamagaluru, Chamarajanagar, Kodagu, Hassan, Uttara Kannada, Dakshina Kannada, Udupi, Mysuru and Shivamogga — as part of an Eco-Sensitive Zone (ESZ), where sand mining, quarrying and development activities like construction of schools, hospitals, group housing would be banned, Jayachandra said.

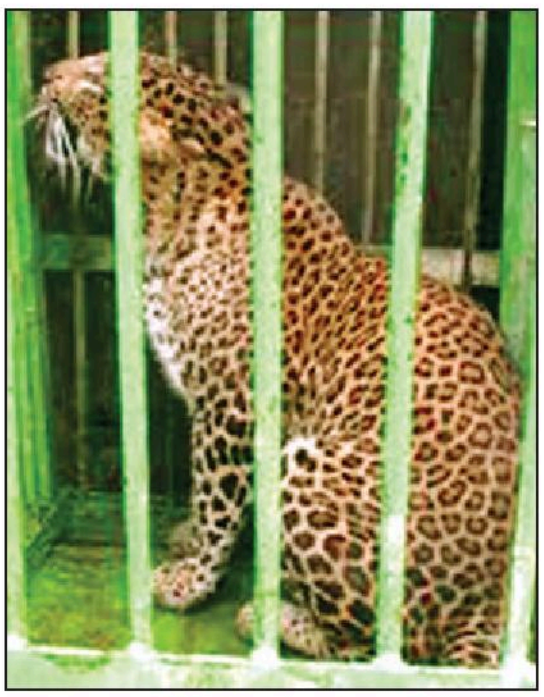
All MLAs cutting across party lines and Gram Panchayats representing the above regions have unanimously opposed the report and passed resolutions against the report, Jayachandra added.

In February this year, the Ministry of Environment and Forest (MoEF) sought objections from the State government on declaration of 20,668 sq km spread across 11 districts in the Western Ghats range in the State as ESZ. The State government had previously requested the Centre not to declare populated areas, agricultural land and plantation regions as ESZs. However, this time the State government wants the entire Kasturirangan report itself to be withdrawn.

"The State government has taken sufficient steps to preserve and conserve forests, deemed forests, sanctuaries and protected areas in the Western Ghats," Jayachandra said and added that the same will be conveyed to the Centre.

Public representatives and local residents have been opposing the implementation of the report. Once the final notification is issued by the MoEF, the earmarked zone will be "no-go area" for activities like mining, setting up industries etc.

Leopard trapped in Hunsur



Hunsur, Apr. 20 (Raghu)- A four-year-old leopard, which had caused panic among the residents of Shanthipura village in Hunsur, was trapped by the Forest Department on the night of Apr. 18 by placing a cage in the field belonging to one Elizabeth Rani.

It is reported that following the disappearance of pet dogs during nights, the villagers who suspected the presence of a leopard in the area, had informed the same to the Forest Department officials, who had kept a cage in the field belonging to one Elizabeth.

The leopard, which walked into the cage, was trapped in it on Apr. 18.

The Forest officials later released the leopard into the Nagarahole Forest.

Belavatha Mystery Fire: NSG team in city

BIOMASS ACCUMULATION CAUSED THE FIRE

In a report submitted to Deputy Commissioner D. Randeep, S. Rajashekar, an environmental engineer who has done his M.Tech in Chemical Engineering from Bengaluru has said that biomass accumulation under the sand was the cause of fire. "Biomass dumps from nearby units that convert coconut shell into charcoal could have caused the accident," he said.

"The affected area is only around 20 ft by 20 ft out of 4-acre plot and the area has deposits of biomass. There is a presence of carbon in the form of charcoal or bio-char which is a type of a bio-fuel. This is a low-lying area and as rainwater flows, it carries fine sand and other materials. Also there is a sewage dump that adds to the bio-mass," he stated in his report.

As the fine sand is dumped on the biomass, there is no space for the oxygen to enter inside. "Due to summer heat, the biomass reaches a temperature of more than 100 degrees and the process is called pyrolysis where gases like methane and hydrogen are released. These gases have no escape route since fine sand is covered on it. When we throw a stone, the stone displaces the sand and makes way for the gas to escape. While escaping, the gas catches fire due to heat from the sand friction," Rajashekar explained.

That day, the fire started only when Harshal walked on the sand area with force, thereby disturbing the sand allowing the accumulated gases to come out due to pressure.

Supporting his findings, Rajashekar said that along with the industrial waste and other dumps, the area surrounding the incident spot is dominated by units that convert coconut shells into charcoal.

The pit that is used to convert coconut shells into charcoal. Once the charcoal blocks are collected, powder waste is dumped in Shyadanahalli. These dumps are transformed into biomass that causes fire due to summer heat.

A board cautions visitors not to enter the area at Shyadanahalli.

"Once the charcoal is generated, powder waste is dumped in the area that leads to the accumulation of bio-char. The dumping process is going on here since months," he said in the report.

PRECAUTIONS AT THE SITE

Explaining the precautions to clear the affected site, Rajashekar said that the safe way was to provide a vent to the affected area by carefully digging holes around the site and allow the accumulated gases to escape. The soil must not be disturbed while digging and must be removed slowly.

Once the gases escape, the occurrence of fire can be eliminated and the biomass with excess heat inside must be allowed to cool down. Later, the cooled down portion of the biomass must be removed from the site and this allows further cooling of the biomass. The process must be carried out until entire biomass is completely removed from the affected site, he has stated.

He further said that a conciliation meeting was held recently with farmers where they were promised to allot sites in the developed layout on a 50:50 sharing pattern which was agreed upon by the farmers.

Continuing, Dhruvakumar said that the proposal had been approved by the Board of Management and the Government which has been sent to the court for giving a nod to MUDA to distribute the sites.

He added that once everything is through, about 3,500 sites will be distributed in these two layouts on seniority basis.

Heritage City loses another heritage building on World Heritage Day

Mysuru, Apr. 20 (SBD&BCT)- The Heritage City of Mysuru has lost one more heritage building and that too on the World Heritage Day. The building, located on Dewan's Road, was demolished on Tuesday (Apr. 18) by JCB machines.

The building was located near the Dolphin Bakery and it earlier housed the Manipal Finance Office. The building was among the 201 buildings that have been listed by the Mysuru City Heritage Committee. It was the place where Ramakrishna Ashram was started before it was shifted to Yadavagiri. Rashtrakavi Kuvempu was a student of the Ashram here. The small stretch of Dewan's Road from Sita Vilas Road to Krishna Vilas Road has six heritage buildings. This particular building is said to be owned by a private party and after the Manipal Finance ceased operation from the building, no one occupied it and now the entire structure has been relegated to history.

The Dewan's Road also houses 'Padmalaya' where the Doyen of Journalism Thathaiah once lived. The building has now been converted into Lokayukta Office. Historians say that Sadhvi, the pre-independence era newspaper, was published from this building.

According to sources in the Heritage Committee, there are around 600 heritage buildings in city that are over a century old.

However, Deputy Director of Archaeology Department Gavisiddaiah said that he has no information about the demolished building being among the heritage structures in city. He said that he has to examine records and then comment.

Sources said that the Heritage Committee had recently listed 201 heritage buildings and the final report will be submitted in a month's time. Once the report is submitted, the District Administration would release a list of rules, regulations and guidelines to conserve these structures.

Deputy Commissioner D. Randeep is pushing for the early release of regulations and once they come into force, it will not be easy to demolish heritage buildings, sources said.

It may be recalled here that just a week ago another heritage building near Ayurveda College Circle which housed Kerala Samajam was demolished.

Last year, F. K. Irani bungalow, a heritage building named 'Krupalaya' in Nazarbad, was also razed to ground by a builder. The kings of Yadu dynasty had constructed this building to provide accommodation for 'Huzur Secretaries.'

Kids educated on detection of food adulteration

Octogenarian conducts his 3,019th programme at Chinnara Mela

Mysuru, Apr. 20 (US&SP) - As part of the ongoing Chinnara Mela summer camp, Mysore Grahakara Parishat (MGP) had organised a programme at Vanaranga in Kalamandira premises here yesterday which featured a demonstration on detection of adulteration in food items.

MGP Convenors C.V. Nagaraj and V. Mahesh demonstrated the techniques to identify adulterants in common food items. They pointed out that food items like oil, butter, ghee, pulses, khova, pepper and saffron were often adulterated with look-alike materials with no nutritional value and detrimental to health.

They conducted demonstration to identify an adulterated item.

Many of the camp participants too involved in the demonstration posing inquisitive and intriguing questions to the organisers.

Nagaraj and Mahesh asked children not to be lured by cheap lollipops and sweets which were made with adulterated raw materials and carcinogenic colours not approved for food items.

The children seemed to relish the educative interlude amidst the routine cultural programmes.

Camp Director Mime Ramesh and others were present.

Today (Apr. 20) the children will be given a demonstration on Prevention of Fire mishaps between 4.30 pm and 5.30 pm.

Tomorrow (Apr. 21) renowned singer Vasu Dikshit will render vachana gayana at Vanaranga from 4.30 pm and 5.30 pm.

Mumbai Indians look to continue winning run against Kings XI Punjab

Indore, Apr. 20- Mumbai Indians have won four of their last five matches in the 2017 Indian Premier League (IPL) and will look to continue their excellent run in the Tournament when they face Kings XI Punjab in Indore tonight.

The two-time IPL champions had a disappointing start to this year's tournament when they lost to Rising Pune Supergiant. However, MI have completed a record four consecutive run chases since then and thanks to this brilliant display, Rohit Sharma's men are currently second in the league table with eight points from five matches.

The biggest strength for Mumbai Indians in this tournament has been the performance of their middle-order batsmen. Delhi youngster Nitish Rana has been the star for MI and with two important half-centuries under his belt, he has been an absolute revelation in this year's IPL.

Rana has found perfect support in Pandya brothers — Krunal and Hardik — who have impressed everyone with their all-round performances. The three youngsters have scored a combined 362 runs in the tournament till now and as a result, they've been a constant in most of MI's successful run chases.

Murali Vijay

Although the Indian youngsters have stolen the show for MI till now, it has not stopped West Indies batsman Kieron Pollard from showing off his destructive batting skills. The 29-year old has played some good knocks for his team this season and his 47-ball 70 against Royal Challengers Bangalore helped them seal an unlikely win at the M. Chinnaswamy Stadium.

The only concern for MI has been the form of their skipper Rohit Sharma. He had a rough start to the season and could manage just 9 runs in the first four matches. However, he made a strong comeback against Gujarat Lions with an unbeaten 40 off 29 deliveries and that can be the morale boost the India batsman needed to regain his old form.

On the other hand, it has been a disappointing week for Kings XI Punjab. After winning their first two matches convincingly against Rising Pune Supergiant and Royal Challengers Bangalore, KXIP went on to lose three in a row and are currently fifth in the IPL table with four points.

The biggest problem for KXIP has been the form of their overseas batsmen who have failed to perform in the last three matches. Glenn Maxwell and Hashim Amla played brilliantly in the first two matches, but both of them have struggled to score runs ever since. The situation has been even worse for David Miller and Eoin Morgan as both of them have failed to produce a single big innings in the tournament so far.

Historically, Mumbai Indians have a slender lead over Kings XI Punjab as they have won 9 out of their last 17 meetings. However, KXIP have not lost a single match at the Holkar Stadium in Indore this season and they will surely be looking to put their IPL campaign back on track with a win over the in-form MI at their lucky 'home' ground.

BAN ON RED BEACONS FOR VIP VEHICLES

Even vehicles of PM and President not exempt

New Delhi, Apr. 20- The decision of Union Government to ban red beacons atop cars of all Ministers, politicians, judges and bureaucrats applies even to President, Prime Minister, Chief Justice of India and Lok Sabha Speaker.

The ban is effective from May 1. Initial reports said that the ban will exempt the country's top dignitaries such as the President, Prime Minister and the Chief Justice of India and the Speaker. Later, Union Transport Minister Nithin Gadkari clarified that no one in the country will use red beacons except for ambulances and vehicles of Fire Service, Police, and Army which will be allowed to use blue flashing beacons to cut through traffic.

About six categories of beacons — primarily red, blue and yellow — are in use in India. But the red, or the coveted "lal batti", has been drawing maximum attention as an elitist VIP symbol since the British rulers introduced it.

"We have decided to remove the clause from the Central Motor Vehicles Rules, 1989, that gave the Centre and States the power to decide who should be allowed to display red beacons. The Road Ministry will shortly notify the amended rules," Finance Minister Arun Jaitley said.

The Road Transport Ministry had earlier proposed limiting the privilege to five Constitutional authorities — the President, Vice-President, Prime Minister, Chief Justice of India, and Speaker of the Lok Sabha. The proposal was not approved. According to the Government, vehicles with beacon lights have no place in a democratic country.

People often saw these flashing lights as shining examples of power and VIP status, more than security aids. Even lower-level politicians and officials misuse the beacons to show off their importance, especially in smaller towns.

'STOP MISUSE OF VEHICLES'

Reacting to the ban on red beacons, former MLC G. Madhusudan has said that the Government must take back the vehicles provided to the VIPS. Only senior officials of the rank of Deputy Commissioner and above senior Police Officers, Army and other Para-Military forces must be given vehicles. All other vehicles must be withdrawn.

"This will stop the VIPs from misusing official vehicles and the drivers for personal purposes. Many times we have seen these vehicles and drivers being used to drop children to schools and taking family members for shopping," he said.

Madhusudan has suggested that instead of giving vehicles and drivers, allowances can be paid to the VIPS to reimburse their official fuel expenses. "VIPs can travel in their own cars and claim fuel expenses only for the official work," he said. This will curb misuse of Government vehicles," he opined.

'OLD ORDER'

The Centre's order to ban beacon lights atop Government vehicles was an old one, said MLA Vasu. "It is an old order and the Government is just implementing it stringently now," he said.

"Though the Supreme Court had passed a series of orders on the use of red beacons by VIPs, no one took them seriously. In Karnataka especially, the use of red beacon cars is rampant. The Centre's move will herald a new beginning," he said.

After visiting Amba Vilas Palace, Prahlad Modi and family got into three tongs and went around the Palace on the road in the outer periphery. The dignitary family earlier visited Srirangapatna and Chamundi Hill. On their arrival in city they were welcomed by City BJP President Dr. B.H. Manjunath and other leaders.

Petrol pumps to be closed on all Sundays from May 14

Chennai, Apr. 20- Beginning 14th May, petrol pumps in eight States will be closed on Sundays following Prime Minister Narendra Modi's call to conserve oil, a Fuel Pump Owners' Body said in Chennai yesterday.

"We had planned to shut our outlets on Sundays a few years back. But Oil Marketing Companies (OMCs) had then requested us to reconsider our decision. Now we have decided to shut the outlets on Sundays," said Suresh Kumar, an Executive Committee Member of the consortium of Indian Petroleum Dealers.

He said that the Association's decision was made in view of the Prime Minister's call during his recent "Mann Ki Baat" programme to conserve oil to save the environment. Kumar, also the Vice-President of Tamil Nadu Petroleum Dealers Association, said that nearly 20,000 outlets in Tamil Nadu, Kerala, Karnataka, Puducherry, Andhra Pradesh, Telangana, Maharashtra and Haryana would be shut for 24 hours on Sundays, starting May 14.

"In Tamil Nadu, we expect a business loss of Rs. 150 crore if we do not operate on a Sunday. But we have been seeing a decline in sales on Sundays by up to 40%," he said.

Asked if the Association's decision was supported by the OMCs, he said, "We will communicate our decision to them shortly." Kumar said that the petrol pumps which normally have about 15 staff each would have one staff member on the holidays to provide fuel if there is an emergency situation.

On the issue of OMCs hiking the margins to petroleum outlets, he said the Association was discussing it and would soon make an announcement in this regard.

WORD OF THE DAY

Methuselah

Pronunciation: muh-THOO-zuh-luh

Meaning: An ancestor of Noah held to have lived 969 years; an oversize wine bottle holding about six litres.

Example: The winery has started bottling their champagne in Methuselahs.

Origin: What do Jeroboam, Methuselah, Salmanazar, Balthazar, and Nebuchadnezzar have in common? Larger-than-life biblical figures all, yes (four kings and a venerable patriarch), but they're all also names of oversized wine bottles. A Jeroboam is usually the equivalent of about four 750-milliliter bottles (about 3 liters). One Methuselah holds about eight standard bottles' worth, a Salmanazar 12, a Balthazar 16, and a Nebuchadnezzar a whopping 20. (Each of these terms is also sometimes styled lowercase.) No one knows who decided to use those names for bottles, but we do know that by the 1800s Jeroboam was being used for large goblets or "enormous bottles of fabulous content." It wasn't until sometime early in the 20th century that Methuselah and all the other names were chosen for specific bottle sizes.

PHRASE OF THE DAY

High and Dry

Meaning: To be left behind; abandoned. Being in a helpless situation without a way to recover. Imagine driving to a friend's wedding, only for your car to break down along the way. You could try calling for help, but if no one is willing to offer their support, the saying 'high and dry' would be an appropriate phrase to describe the helpless predicament.

Origin: It is believed that this phrase has to do with boats that sometimes get stranded on beaches due to shifting sea levels. For instance, if a boat is left near the shore during high tides, then it is at risk of being grounded later on. Why? Because water levels can decrease throughout the day. So while a boat may have been left on the coast in high waters, in just a few hours, the sea level can fluctuate in that area, leaving the boat stranded on land. Indeed, the boat was abandoned by the water, it was left 'high and dry.' This phrase is at least over 215 years old. Towards the end of 18th century, it was used in the context described above. It appears, this saying eventually began being applied, not just to stranded boats, but to any helpless situation.
